JURY OUT IN "LITTLE SUNBEAM" CASE; ABSOLUTE DIVORCE FOR MRS. POILLON.

Court Cases in Which Four Handsome Women Are Viciously Interested—Alimony Awarded to Mrs. James A. Garland—Verdict for $7,000 for Mrs. Riker.

Of vital importance are the proceedings in court today to four handsome women.

First is Mrs. Frank M. Carnes, whose husband in a suit for $25,000 damages, says Arthur Hanson called her his "sunbeam" and "bargain counter." The jury is now considering its verdict.

Then comes Mrs. "Jack" Poillon, named as co-respondent in the suit of Mrs. Frederica Poillon for divorce from her husband, in which a decree was granted by Justice Stecker.

Mrs. James A. Garland was awarded alimony of $1,250 a month in her suit for absolute divorce.

Lastly comes pretty Mrs. Minnie T. Riker, who was awarded $7,000 damages against Mrs. Josephine Clopton in her suit for $500,000.

"LITTLE SUNBEAM" CASE GOES TO JURY.

The case of Frank M. Carnes, who seeks to recover $25,000 from Arthur Hanson, his former partner in the most extract business for alienating the affections of his wife, is now before the jury. Its twelve members are now considering a verdict and may reach a conclusion this afternoon.

To-day's closing of the case was made notable by the fierce attack of counsel for Carnes upon defendant in the case, and for the presence of many women in the court-room attracted by the fervent letters which Hanson is accused of having written to Mrs. Carnes, wife of the plaintiff.

It was in such endearing terms as "My Dear Bargain Counter," and "Little Sunbeam," that Hanson was charged with beginning premeditated epistles to Mrs. Carnes, which later led to a separation and the present suit.

Counsel for Hanson strenuously denied

My Dear Bargain Counter: Don't you think I could hit you with a bunch of snow? No. Well, I do.

that the defendant intended the endearing terms for Mrs. Carnes, and vehemently declared that the real "Bargain Counter" and the genuine "Little Sunbeam" had their prototype in a Brooklyn girl to whom he was engaged.

In his summing up to the jury, counsel for Hanson asked why Mrs. Carnes had not been called by the plaintiff as a witness in the case, and said that he understood the plaintiff was preparing to receive his wife again into his family.

Col. Campbell said in answer to opposing counsel that he didn't call Mrs. Carnes as a witness because the law did not allow him to call her, but that the defense could have called her and didn't.

Justice Dugro then gave the case to the jury.

MRS. POILLON GETS ABSOLUTE DIVORCE.

Justice Stecker, in the Supreme Court, today decided that Mrs. Frederica Poillon was entitled to an absolute divorce from John James Herring Poillon, President of the Liberty Realty Company.

Mrs. J. E. Poillon, the wife of a cousin of the defendant, was named as co-respondent.

The plaintiff and defendant were married many years ago, and have two grown up children. Mrs. Poillon first commenced an action for a separation from her husband, and after its abandonment sued him for her dower right in his estate, claiming he had endeavored to transfer property to prevent her from ever getting a share in case of his death. She said she had received a liberal allowance from him, and had resided in a house of which he was the owner.

Frederick Poillon, the son, and Louise Poillon, the daughter, testified on the trial that their father took Mrs. "Jack" Poillon out driving on many occasions at Pleasant Lake.

Other witnesses told of the defendant's visits to Mrs. "Jack" Poillon at Spring Lake, N. J., and at Bayshore. A colored maid, Cora Phillips, said that when ever Mr. Poillon visited her mistress Mrs. Poillon used to make her go to bed at 8 o'clock.

Louise Porter, another colored maid of the co-respondent, testified she often saw the defendant kiss his cousin's wife, Mrs. Poillon, and that she had seen her in the presence of his wife and at her request. The co-respondent kissed him once because after she had had some trouble with a piece of property he sold it for her.

"When I came back," said Mr. Poillon, "she kissed me on the forehead and said 'You're a brick'."

J. Edward Poillon, the husband of the co-respondent, testified as to the friendly relations existing between his wife and the defendant, and said he did not oppose the friendship, but on the contrary approved of it.

Mrs. Hester B. Poillon positively denied the plaintiff's allegations.

When the case came up for trial counsel for the defendant endeavored to have it held in private, but Justice Stecker, after ascertaining the nature of the case, refused to accede to his request.

MRS. J. A. GARLAND AWARDED ALIMONY.

A despatch to The Evening World from Salem, Mass., announces that Marie Garland has secured in the Superior Court an order requiring her husband, James A. Garland, of this city, to pay her $120 a month pending the trial of a suit for divorce she has filed against him. The order makes the payment of the sum mentioned date back to March 28 last, when it is alleged, Mr. Garland ceased to contribute to the support of his wife and children.

Mr. Garland is a son of the late James A. Garland, who died in 1900, leaving a fortune of millions and the famous Garand collection of porcelains, which J. Pierpont Morgan purchased from the heirs and presented to the Metropolitan Museum of Art. Mrs. Garland, in the Massachusetts court, alleged that the income of her husband is $70,000 a year and that he is soon to receive an interest of one-third in the income of $100,000 which accumulated after the elder Garland had made money.

Mrs. Garland was Marie Louise Tudor, daughter of Mrs. Frederick Tudor, of Brookline, Mass., a leader in Boston society. She married Mr. Garland, who is a Harvard man, in 1880. They had a magnificent home in Hamilton, Mass., and Mr. Garland's unexpected return from a business trip to this home about a year ago gave rise to the trouble which resulted in the divorce proceedings.

The Garlands have three children, who, according to the terms of the late James A. Garland's will, have a large interest in the estate. A determined effort will be made by both parents to secure the custody of the children.
